HAIR AND SCALP NEED DAILY CARE

If you value the appearance of your hair, you should treat your scalp as often and well as you brush your teeth and rub into the scalp pores twice daily a little Parisian Sage. This treatment is not a mere "hair tonic." It is bottled nourishment for the hair roots, and it is simply wonderful what an improvement its use for even a week will make in the appearance of anyone's hair. It never injures, is delightfully cool and pleasant to the scalp, and takes out the dull, lifeless look in the hair, making it soft, fluffy, glossy and beautiful. Two or three applications remove every trace of dandruff, and daily use will prevent its return. Sold by the Red Cross Pharmacy and leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

I visited Sears & Roebuck's large plant, which they have just built here, only about 30 rods from the house, beside the new railroad (Western Pacific). They said they at first located their plant at San Francisco but soon removed to here, as they considered this the most central point in California from which to deliver

SIGHTS ABOUT STOCKTON, CAL.

Are Described By Vermont Auto Tourists—Stockton Is Booming.

Stockton, Cal., July 6, 1915.

Editor, Times: Ha and I are at our son's place, resting and looking over the city somewhat. Clarence and Barton took the boat for San Francisco this morning to look over the situation there as to whether we had better take the boat or go in our autos and, while there, whether to take rooms and board ourselves or do some other way. They expect to come back day after tomorrow.

When we struck Stockton, we struck tide water from the Pacific ocean, although nearly 100 miles from the ocean by boat. Stockton is one of the oldest cities on or near this coast, and during the California gold fever of 1849 and 1850 was a place of importance, as all the main supplies for the mining camps were shipped here by water and this was a general headquarters for mining supplies for the whole California mining region. After the mining fever had subsided, Stockton was a dead city, as far as business is concerned, for nearly 50 years. One of the principal reasons was that in sluicing for gold the streams were filled with earth washed from the hills, so that during high water the city itself was practically a lake, or stood in a lake of water.

For years the people of the city had tried to better their situation. They could get no relief from the state government, as they considered it a costly job and that the people from the whole country came here and sluiced for gold and filled the streams, causing the floods. Finally, about 10 years ago, the United States government took hold of the job and built what is called the diverting canal, costing over $2,000,000. Since then the city has jumped from a population of 17,500 to over 42,000, and is still on the jump and business is booming.

The house in which I am writing was built by my son seven years ago in the middle of a wheat field just harvested (streets were then being laid out) at a cost of about $1,000. Now he values it at $4,000. Now there is a double track electric line within four rods of the house—the line that extends from Stockton to Sacramento.

The Western Pacific built six years ago their line through here, within 30 rods, and built their depot less than one-half mile away. Two large stores, several stories high, are on opposite corners of this block. Directly opposite, east of being built, and they are now building the Harris Manufacturing plant, for manufacturing harvesting machinery, costing, they say, nearly $1,000,000.

Across the street this morning, I saw the electric lines blocked. Come to go over there, I found they were taking out of their store shed one of their harvesters. In getting it out, they blocked the whole street for 10 minutes. The machine cuts a swath 34 feet wide (over two rods) and is run by gasoline power. They also make a bean harvester on the same principle, which will cut (instead of pulling) as in the west, thresh, winnow and sack 400 bags (100 pounds each) in nine hours. This is a great bean country and they are cheaper than in the East. Their grain harvester cuts, threshes, winnows and sacks 1,200 sacks in a day of 10 hours.

We attended the Fourth of July parade here yesterday. It was quite a show, a mile or more long. All city business represented, as well as fraternal societies, accompanied by three bands of music. Probably 175 musicians in all. The Harris Manufacturing Co. is another manufacturer of farm machinery, employing 1,400 men. They manufacture the famous Caterpillar engine. We have seen lots of them here at work and have met them on the road. They run on treads, same as an old-fashioned horsepower.

They have natural hot water baths here, same as at Manitou Springs, Col., and we patronized them in the same way when we first got here. There is a larger crowd here all the time than at Manitou. They are open every day in the year. The swimming tank is about 20 rods long and five wide, about one-third of it in a building, so you can have your choice whether you swim in the open or inside. Nearly every evening there is a band concert here, the members of the band being paid $150 a year for their services.

The temperature of the water, I should say, was about 100 degrees. The water flows from an old gas well. It tastes of both sulphur and salt. We all, Clarence's family and us, attended a band concert there Sunday evening. It was a regular Tunbridge "world's fair," with a much extended midway. Last evening the younger members of the party attended the fireworks at the same place. They claim the display beat anything they ever saw.

This city is lighted from natural gas from wells within the city.

(July 8.) I have been looking over Stockton this forenoon. As I said before, Clarence (my son who lives here in Stockton) and Barton are in San Francisco; went by boat yesterday. We got a letter from Helen who is visiting their daughters in Knowles, about 100 miles south of here. They want we should meet them at Yosemite park tomorrow. We cannot, as the boys will not be back from San Francisco before tomorrow. It is 100 miles from here to the park.

The sun is the nearest overhead at noon here of any place we have visited. We are in the latitude of Richmond, Va. It is cool nights, but rather hot in the middle of the day, yet there is a cool sea breeze most of the time.

Yesterday afternoon I visited the gas wells, only about one-half mile from here. They are bored to a depth of about 2,000 feet. There is a stream of hot water flowing out of the wells with the gas at all times. It is impregnated with iron, sulphur and salt. Baths in them, they claim, are a sure cure for rheumatism. If they have rheumatism here, there must be a lot of cures, as every time I have been there, there have been several hundred suffering, night or day.

This morning I visited a hot-spring establishment (the first I had ever seen). They go through about the same process as they do in bottling milk. I said so to the man showing me around. I said to him, "More of this hot water is used in this city than milk," and he said, "Certainly," and I guess he told the truth. Milk and beer sell for about the same price here, 10 cents a quart. They average in bottles 2,160 bottles an hour, or 12,960 bottles in an eight-hour day. Takes a lot of cove to give that amount of milk.

I visited Sears & Roebuck's large plant, which they have just built here, only about 30 rods from the house, beside the new railroad (Western Pacific). They said they at first located their plant at San Francisco but soon removed to here, as they considered this the most central point in California from which to deliver Advice To Prospective Tourists.

I believe I said before, that I would make a summary of our voyage so far. Most of us, when we started, were a little fearful of our journey. But it is practicable for anyone in almost any kind of a car to make the journey. It was not necessary for us to travel on some of the bad roads we traversed in western Colorado. For safety, keep the Lincoln highway through the mountains. But if you want to see mountains, canyons and scenery, go through Colorado. Don't stop and try to go to farming in Nevada. Nevada is pure desert, mountains and all. Mining is about the only occupation, and that is declining. The now-called deserts of western Nebraska, Colorado and Utah, under a system of irrigation, will soon rival most any other part of the United States, as agricultural lands. California, with her system of irrigation, raising six crops of alfalfa a year and other crops in proportion, will beat them all. Potatoes and other vegetables are kept growing here all the time. When they dig potatoes here, they plant the piece for another crop at the same time. They can gather ripe oranges from a tree at all times of the year. Most fruit retails here nearly as high as in the East, but watermelons and muskmelons, the like of which I never tasted in Vermont, cost practically nothing here. Watermelons, big, luscious ones, taken from the cart, one or two cents each, and muskmelons (cantaloupes) 10 cents for two dozen. Apples are plenty here, but I have not sampled them yet, but cantaloupes I have sampled by the two dozen.

How Germany Thinks the War Started.

In the July American Magazine Edward Lyell Fox, correspondent in Germany, for that publication, writes a "highly interesting article entitled 'God Punish England' in which he reports the intensity of the feeling in Germany against England. In connection with this subject he quotes Major von Herwarth, a German officer, who tells in part as follows what he regards as the origin of the trouble:

"England is jealous of our commerce. We do not have week-end parties. We work. We become too powerful in trade. We disturb the British peace of mind, therefore Britain must be rid of this disturbance. We saw with regret that our relations with England were becoming unsatisfactory. There was no rhyme or reason why we should not have come to a good solid understanding. We tried for it hard, but in vain: England turned to France and Russia, and it was a remarkable coincidence that ever since the triple entente was complete our neighbors in the east and in the west adopted an attitude against us that grew more and more hostile. We knew that the struggle was coming and we were prepared. But, more than anything, we resent the British hypocrisy over the neutrality of Belgium—this from the nation that made her empire by gobbling up little countries all over the world! You see, we cannot think of such things and remain calm. Germany is only one thousandth part of the surface of the globe. (The entire area of the globe, including all oceans, is about one thousand times the area of Germany. The entire area of all the land on the globe, including fertile territory, deserts, steppes and the polar regions, is less than three hundred times the area of Germany—Editor.)
